

A person who can contribute to local society as a leader

Develop Self-reliant Individuals <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The ability to think logically and construct one's views while incorporating other people's opinions The ability to engage in high-level communication in English Proper understanding of contemporary international society 	Creation of New Valuable Things through "Collaboration" <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Practice of hearing opinions of people from various backgrounds and understanding the situation from their position Possess an ability to have high-level debates that result in cooperative decision-making, while critically evaluating opinions that differ from one's own 	Creative Proposals for Sustainable World Development <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Possess an ability to analyze current situations and discover various issues within international society. Possess an ability to make creative suggestions through exchange with people domestically and internationally Obtain comprehensive skills that will allow for one to live in an unpredictable society through one's own abilities
--	---	--

Develop Individuals with Abilities that can be Applied to a Variety of Situations "Debate practice" "Develop high-level English communication skills"	Research Initiative "Super Global Research"	Exchange Overseas "Engage in exchange with schools overseas through a bidirectional communication system" "Santa Clara Training Course"
Cultivate generic skills such as logical thinking ability and communication skills that can be used within the international community.	Cultivate an approach to difficult problems through persistent research and cultivate creativity that can give birth to new, valuable concepts through the Research Initiative.	Instill a desire to become active future global leaders and a sense of purpose, as well as develop the ability to transmit research results to the international society.

A Deep yet Broad Education in Relation to Students' own Local Communities as well as the International Society
"Super Global Basic Seminar"
Develop a deep and wide understanding of their local region and the world through lectures conducted by highly specialized teachers with themes based on world issues and experiential study.